Engagement overview

Politigig served as a strategic resource to the Patrick Sampson campaign. The engagement was designed to help the candidate evaluate campaign choices, sharpen priorities, and move forward with clearer next steps while the campaign retained responsibility for execution and daily management.

What Politigig did

- Provided strategic campaign guidance
Discussed campaign direction, priorities, and practical considerations affecting a county commissioner race.
- Helped frame decisions
Offered an outside political perspective so the candidate could evaluate options, tradeoffs, and next actions with greater clarity.
- Supported campaign positioning
Advised on how the campaign could present its purpose and distinguish the candidate within a multi-candidate local contest.
- Identified actionable priorities
Helped translate broad campaign goals into more immediate areas of focus for the candidate and campaign team.
- Maintained an advisory boundary
Politigig provided consultation, while the candidate and campaign retained responsibility for staffing, spending, field work, communications, compliance, and implementation.

How the work supported the campaign

The consulting engagement gave the campaign access to targeted political guidance without replacing its internal leadership. Politigig's role was to inform decisions and provide strategic perspective; the campaign determined which recommendations to adopt and was responsible for carrying them out.
